Everybody likes socks and underwear for the holidays, right? Not.

But they might get excited about "disposable" underwear and "secret-compartment" socks. They're two of many hot holiday gifts for your globe-trotting friends and family — whether they're actual adventurers or just Walter Mitty-style wayfarers.

Here, we wrap up gifts from $10 to $25 that will send them on their merry way. And as for those well-traveled folks who wronged you this year? Just give them a guilt trip.

This lock rocks: Search Alert's luggage padlock will make you want to do a little safety dance. The Transportation Security Administration-approved device lets officials open your check-in bags using a special key. Call 1-800-733-8588 or visit www.cclsecurity.com.

Socks and underwear: For travelers who can't stand the thought of repacking dirty underwear for the trip home, OneDerWear (www.onederwear.com) sells disposable, biodegradable cotton briefs/boxers for men and briefs/thongs for women. Cost is $10 for a five-piece package.

Zip It Gear makes it hard for thieves to make off with your cash — because first, they'll have to take off your socks. The ankle, sport and crew socks have a zippered com-

World view: Nothing says "B-list" gift recipient like a calendar — unless it's the 2005 Lonely Planet calendar, which promises an adventurous year with 365 photos, from Crete's sidewalk cafes at dusk to the peaks of Argentina's Los Glaciares National Park. $12.95. Visit www.magellans.com or www.workman.com.

Road woes: If you run out of gas, you can use the Pack-A-Cone as a dunce cap. For other, nonself-inflicted roadside emergencies, you can use it as a safety device. The flashing, battery-operated collapsible cone, made of nylon and polyester, opens to 16 inches high and folds back down to inches. The cost is $24.85; visit www.magellans.com.

Jet-set skin: Take care of your skin in transit with Dr. Hauschka's Jet Set kit for holistic travelers. The kit includes facial toner, hand and eye cream, rosemary leg and arm toner, and a leave-on mask that disappears into the skin. The cost is $21.50; visit www.flight001.com. For guys, there's the shaving basics kit from Anthony: Logistics for Men. The citrus-scented glycerin cleansing bar, shave cream and after-shave balm will ensure a smooth trip. Cost is $25; visit www.flight001.com.
