

Gifts for globe-trotters

Spending anywhere from $5 to $5 million, you can send the jet-setters on your list on their merry way

CONTINUED FROM 1H

This lock rocks

Search Alert's luggage padlock will make you want to do a little safety dance. The Transportation Security Administration-approved device lets officials open your check-in bags using a special key. Best feature: A tiny window displays green when the lock hasn't been opened, and red when it has, so you'll know if somebody's been pawing through your stuff. $7.95; for a list of dealers, visit www.cclsecurity.com

CCL SECURITY/WILLINIS LOCK

$5-$25

STAR-TELEGRAM/RON T. ENNIS

Socks and underwear

For travelers who can't stand the thought of repacking dirty underwear for the trip home, OneDerWear (www.onederwear.com) sells disposable, biodegradable cotton briefs/boxers for men and briefs/thongs for women. $10 for a five-piece package.

And Zip It Gear makes it hard for thieves to make off with your cash – because first, they'll have to take off your socks. The ankle, sport and crew socks, designed by a guy who was pickpocketed in Prague, have a zippered compartment large enough to hold credit cards, ID, money and a key. $14.99-$23.99. (888) 494-7769 or www.zipitgear.com.

STAR-TELEGRAM/JEFFERY WASHINGTON

For Fido

Parched pouches and their luggage-laden companions will like Expand-A-Bowl, which squeezes into a compact zippered pouch, then pops out into a full-size bowl. The bowl comes in brown, navy and . . . for those more feminine four-legged types, fuchsia. $18; www.flight001.com.

STAR-TELEGRAM/RON T. ENNIS